A Very Modern Romance

Meghan Markle and Prince Harry are in love and are to marry. They seem ideally suited. Their interests are the same. They have both confronted difficult upbringings and triumphed. Now they triumph together.

This exciting and evocative new programme features contributions from best-selling authors Andrew Morton (author of Diana: Her True Story and of the newly released and best-selling Meghan: A Hollywood Princess), Jeffrey Archer (Kain and Abel), leading historians Sir Anthony Seldon and Sarah Bradford, Viscountess Bangor and top journalists Richard Kay (Daily Mail), Katie Nicholl (Mail on Sunday, Vanity Fair) and Emily Nash (Hello!).

Harry and Meghan: A Very Modern Royal Romance explores the social background that now makes this adventurous marriage seem thoroughly in keeping with the new more commitments of the British Royal Family. Following in the tradition of Prince William and Kate Middleton, Harry and Meghan are thoroughly in step with the hopes and aspirations of the young in Britain and indeed the world. Their marriage is likely to bring great benefits to the position of the Royal Family in Britain and add significantly to the beneficial influence it can have on the lives of the British people.

The programme includes remarkable new footage that will explore and celebrate the remarkable career and background of Meghan Markle. The American mixed-race daughter of an Emmy-award winning lighting designer and a black yoga teacher, Meghan Markle has made her way to stardom through the hit TV series Suits.

Meghan Markle is a powerful and resourceful woman's rights campaigner. The issues she confronts are not always popular or fashionable issues. Her highlighting of the plight of women in the Third World is remarkable in its fluency, commitment and reach. Remarkably she is now probably to become the Duchess of Sussex and a member of the inner circle of the British Royal Family.

Prince Harry has broken out of the straightjacket of royalty without losing his royal dignity. He served 10 years in the British Army - including in the Afghanistan warzone. His most recent achievement has been to create the Invictus Games. As well as championing the issues of the mental health of the British people he has also honoured the memory of his mother Princess Diana. He has been a powerful influence following and enhancing her work with landmines, AIDS and with various charities supporting the disadvantaged in Africa.

We still remember the 12-year-old Prince Harry walking behind the body of his mother Princess Diana in the most public funeral that the world has ever seen. Now this young man has engaged the respect of the world with a combination of empathy and a courageous outward-going nature.

Both Harry and his bride-to-be are completely at home in global celebrity culture. 82 years ago, a divorced, commoner American bride led to the abdication of King Edward VIII. This royal marriage sets and confirms a revised and revolutionised set of British values.
